I, [redacted], would like to inform you that I own the house which was broken into by a brother, without an order. I was visiting my son, [redacted] and I stayed with him for four days. My belongings and the paperwork of the house are inside the house. Brother Abu ‘Abdul-Rahman al-Tunisi claims that the house belongs to my son, [redacted] while this house is mine. I built it 80 years ago and my son [redacted] is fifty years old. This is the only house I own, and my neighbors testify to this. I want to document permanently that this house belongs to me.

The request: I request from you to expel the one who is staying [in the house] because I don’t have an alternative place to live, and may God reward you the best.
