I was married to a blind man who worked in the Diwan al-Da'wah and Mosques (A Shari'ah member). My family asked him for a Mahr [a dowry given by the man to the woman he is about to marry] of (800 thousand), but I gave up this amount in exchange for my most precious wish:

A license in the Noble Qur'an - increasing [Shari'ah] knowledge, Da'wah to God, jihad for the sake of God, and carrying out a martyrdom operation.

He said that he wanted a [Shari'ah] knowledge seeker to help him in his lessons and sermons, and I agreed with him. But he deceived me in the name of religion, lied to me, and ruined my life. After one month he divorced me.

I used to tell him: "Fear God, O sheikh." He says: "Forget about fearing God now, I will be dealing with God!!!"

I tell him: "My goals are to support my religion." He mocks and repeats the regime's slogan, saying: "Unity, freedom, socialism."

I asked him to have the Shari'ah of God judge between us, but he refused and threatened me that if I went to court, he would keep me suspended and flee from place to place and no one could catch him.

He [illegible], threatened me, and wanted to get me out of my house for no reason. He locked the door and went and threatened me to cut off the water and electricity until I give up my financial rights and do not file my case with the judiciary and ask him for something. So, I did so that I would be saved from his evil and oppression. I was forced to agree, but the right is not lost, God willing, and two witnesses testified to that.

I raised my case to the judiciary after I raised it to the Lord of Heaven, but he did what he wanted: sometimes he recants and sometimes he does not like the judge ...
